MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRMAN

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) Annual Report on Crime and Crime Control is developed by the COG Police Chiefs Committee on behalf of the COG Board of Directors. This report provides the National Capital Region's (NCR) leadership and elected officials with the ability to review and evaluate crime trends from a regional perspective.

Authored by the Police Investigative Commanders Subcommittee, the report collects crime statistics from COG members, neighboring jurisdictions, and federal law enforcement agencies. The first section of the report illustrates the 2023 crime statistics and compares the offenses and arrests against the prior five years of data. The second section of the report highlights the regional initiatives and other efforts by the COG Police Chiefs Committee and its subcommittees to combat crime in the region.

This annual report serves as an important foundation to ongoing work by COG to better understand and provide information on regional crime trends, which will enable a more effective response to reduce these crimes.

I am honored to chair the Police Chiefs Committee, excited for the law enforcement initiatives being implemented regionally, and I look forward to working collaboratively to keep the NCR a safer and more secure region.

Russell E. Hamill, III, Chair, COG Police Chiefs Committee
Chief of Police, Laurel Police Department

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In 2023, the NCR saw a significant decrease in population and increase in crime per capita. An overall increase in Part I/Part A offenses, crimes against persons and property, can mostly be attributed to a 20 percent increase in property crime, largely due to a sharp rise in motor vehicle thefts and larceny that saw increases of 92.5 percent and 9.4 percent, respectively. Similarly, the region experienced an increase in violent crime trends, with robbery being the most significant at 41 percent between 2022 and 2023.

Nationally, violent crime continued to drop from the previous year, particularly strongly declining in murders. Larceny, which includes shoplifting, also decreased, though car thefts continued to increase.

As calls for service continue to increase and staffing levels remain low, law enforcement workforce wellness continues to be a priority for the Police Chiefs Committee. Other priorities include reducing violent crime through increased crime reporting and tracking; enhancing regional law enforcement mutual aid procedures; and reducing non-violent crime in the region through the identification of best practices.

Many law enforcement agencies in the region continued existing or established new efforts to address these crimes trends. This includes interagency collaborations and agency initiatives to leverage and centralize technology and drones for real-time response; interjurisdictional task forces, increased public information, and more training to combat motor vehicle thefts; efforts to mitigate drug trafficking; discussions regarding juvenile offender recidivism; and initiatives to address robberies and organized retail theft. The Police Chiefs Committee and its subcommittees meet regularly to share resources and discuss the latest crime trends to ensure the public's safety in the National Capital Region.

Note: The crime data reported by the Loudoun County Sheriff's Office has been corrected to address a clerical error. This report reflects the revised data. (Updated July 17, 2025)

INTRODUCTION

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) Annual Report on Crime and Crime Control is based on crime statistics reported by 23 local jurisdictions of COG. The report also includes statistics from neighboring jurisdictions, state and federal law enforcement agencies, and local universities to highlight the trends throughout the region. This report, compiled by the COG Police Chiefs Committee, begins by focusing on Part I/Part A Offenses, as defined by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), primarily collected using the following reporting methods:

- Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) Program, and
- National Incident Based Reporting System (NIBRS)

COG disseminated a data collection instrument requesting information from the region's law enforcement agencies on the Police Chiefs Committee. Each agency determines its own reporting method. COG compiled the data, regardless of reporting method, and presents in this report crime trends over five years to provide a clearer picture of crime in the NCR. To gain a more comprehensive understanding of crime trends in the region, additional factors such as the economy, social stressors, legislative changes, and/or changes in police policies and resources should be taken into consideration. This additional analysis is not included in this report.

PART I/PART A OFFENSES

In 2023, the NCR saw an increase in the total number of Part I/Part A offenses over the previous year. There was a 19.8 percent increase in 2023 from 2022. Figure 1 demonstrates the five-year trend, with an overall increase of 22,374 reported offenses between 2022 and 2023 in the NCR.

Table 1 below illustrates the breakdown of Part I/Part A Offenses for each of the reporting COG jurisdictions, as well as the crimes committed per 1,000 people. Table 2 illustrates the breakdown of offenses for the Associate Members, including neighboring jurisdictions and federal agencies.

CRIME TRENDS IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

Crime trends in the NCR are calculated by adding the total number of historical property crimes and violent crimes, and then comparing the total against the previous five years.

There was a 19.8 percent increase in overall property crime in 2023 from the previous year. Figure 2 shows the historical property crime trends from 2019-2023 in the NCR. Property crime includes offenses of burglary, larceny, and motor vehicle theft. Figures 3, 4, and 5 show the historical crime trends for each of these offenses.

Regionally, violent crime increased 17.9 percent in 2023. Figure 6 shows the overall historical violent crime trends from 2019-2023 in the NCR. Violent crime includes homicide, rape, robbery, and aggravated assault. Figures 7, 8, 9, and 10 show the historical crime trends for each of these offenses.

Crime Rate Per Capita

The region's population decreased in 2023 to just over six million and the crime rate per capita increased. The 2023 crime rate per capita was 22.2 per 1,000. Crime rate per capita is a commonly accepted measure of crime and often serves as a basic indicator of overall crime trends. In addition to the overall crime trends, each jurisdiction closely monitors their own crime patterns, and addresses current trends using an assortment of policing, training, and specialized law enforcement.

Figure 11 illustrates the crime rate per capita from 2019-2023. The line in the figure represents the population growth over the last five years.

Calls for service and staffing levels should be included when evaluating crime rate per capita data. Calls for service numbers may not include officer-initiated calls and may only reflect dispatched calls. Table 5 provides a breakdown of the total calls for service in each reporting Primary Member and Associate Member agencies, as well as the staffing levels for sworn and civilian personnel. There was an increase of 4.6 percent calls for service for Primary Members in 2023 from the previous year.
